

Jenny Brinitzer artist statement

For me, painting is a bit of a second act. In 2009, after many years of traveling, I began studying studio art and art history at the college level in an effort to develop a visual language and a skill set that I could use to convey my emotional experience and observations traveling on the canvas.

As a painter I am most interested in representational abstract, the generous use of color and capturing the feel of a place. Lately I have focused my painting on Mexico and New Mexico. In 2012 I was awarded the Hallberg Merit Award for excellence in fine art at Sierra College. My paintings have received multiple awards and are hanging in private collections all over the United States and Europe.

I do occasional commission work along with paintings I create spontaneously. All of my paintings are for sale.
